

MOBILE WORLD CONGRESS 2017: SAGEMCOM TO PRESENT OPEN AND MULTI-PURPOSE LORA™ SENSORS

Rueil Malmaison, 22th February 2017

SAGEMCOM PRESENTS ITS RANGE OF LORA™ SENSORS - OPEN AND MULTI-PURPOSE, COMPLEMENTING ITS END-TO-END IOT SOLUTION.

These brand new sensors can be customized accordingly to customers' use cases, thanks to embedded accelerometer, thermometer and barometer. Easy customization and tuning enable allow any service operator and application provider to design new services.

In compliance with the LoRa™ Alliance standards, these sensors are longstanding and energy-efficient. Sagemcom patents have them particularly effective in radio use. They were selected by Objenious, a subsidiary of Bouygues Telecom dedicated to the Internet of Things, to satisfy their testing needs.

Stéphane Allaire, Chairman of Objenious, noted "There is not such a thing as a IoT project working without a powerful network nor low cost or performant sensors. Following a year of intense cooperation with our partners, Objenious is pleased to offer a comprehensive, fully operational solution. This allows our customers to experiment the quality of our nationwide network and to propose services and applications accordingly to their final users' needs."

Eric Rieul, CEO of Sagemcom, highlighted: "Sagemcom overall focused on the development of solutions enabling the deployment of LoRa™-based networks. Such a range of cost effective, open and multi-purpose sensors will empower IoT-focused actors in their own innovation efforts."

Sagemcom is a founding member of the LoRa™ Alliance and will be present at the Mobile World Congress within the French pavilion, hall 8.1 booth E49.
